Sue will be 82 soon, but when asked her age, she says with a sparkle in her eye, “I’m going to be 21.” Her smile and gentle personality hide her many health problems – high blood pressure, arthritis and diabetes.

Sue came to Christian Care Communities after her doctor told her it would no longer be safe for her to live alone. At Christian Care, her health needs can be monitored and meals and housekeeping are available. Although Sue worked for many years, she has exhausted her pension and now receives Social Security and Medicaid.

Emma was 86, an active member of the Louisville Auxiliary and a faithful Christian Care volunteer. She baked cakes. She planned parties and activities. She visited residents. But after her husband died, Emma was afraid to live alone. She moved to Friendship House on the Louisville Christian Care Campus. Emma continued to serve in the Auxiliary and as a volunteer so she could help take care of those “old people.” At age ninety-four her health failed and she moved to the Campus Health Center. She no longer can bake cakes or plan parties, but she continues to serve. From her bed, she helps those who care for her with her words of encouragement, her warm smile and loving ways.

Sue and Emma are two of the more than 2,500 residents served by Christian Care Communities, a ministry of the nearly 700 Christian Churches in Kentucky. Founded in 1884, Christian Care has made a difference in the lives of thousands of individuals like Sue and Emma.

Through your Fifth Sunday gift, you make a difference in the lives of Sue and Emma and help make this ministry possible. Give generously!
